Seventeen Eastwood Road is an exceptionally gracious English Tudor Manor sitting on 1.2 acres. Built in 1999, the home features a slate roof and finely finished architectural detail. It offers unparalleled views of the golf course at the private and historic Biltmore Forest Country Club. From a wall of windows in the sun room, one can see a panoramic tee to green view of the 3rd hole. From the winding drive to the home, its entrance opens into a great room with a 30-foot vaulted and timbered ceiling and a two-sided stone fireplace. Besides the golf course view, the sun room offers a sweeping view of stone terraces, stonewalled flower gardens, two ponds and "Cocktail Island", which sits just above...
